Brickell

Completely defying all Miami logic, this new spot from "million dollar chef" Walter Martino is completely unremarkable on the outside. But inside, it's as intricate, nuanced, and well-thought-out as any concept we've ever seen. The purple-lit interior is broken through by rotating projections of art – both still and moving – that make your experience entertaining before the food even comes out. When it does, you'll get an array of sushi and seafood dishes served in everything from a candelabra to a purse... or, if you know the secrets, a women's stiletto heel.
